Introduction

Bamboo fiber is the cellulose fiber extracted from the natural growth of bamboo, and is the fifth natural fibers following the cotton, linen, wool, and silk. Bamboo fiber has good air permeability, instantaneous water absorption, strong wear resistance and good dyeing and other characteristics.

Bamboo fabric is a natural textile made from the pulp of bamboo grass. The Bamboo used to produce fabrics (not the same as Panda food) is easily replenished and requires no pesticides to grow

Bamboo is considered one of the most sustainable plants because it grows quickly and does not require chemicals or irrigation, and biodegrades more quickly than oil-based synthetics. Bamboo rayon is made by dissolving pulp bamboo into its cellulose component and then spun into viscose fibers. Clothing made of bamboo rayon typically lasts even longer and holds its shape even better than clothing made of simple bamboo fiber.

Bamboo also has many antibacterial qualities, which bamboo fabric is able to retain, even through multiple washings. Bamboo exhibits up to a 99.8% antibacterial rate. This helps to reduce bacteria that thrive in clothing and cause unpleasant odors. It can also kill odor causing bacteria that live on human skin, making the wearer and his or her clothing smell sweet.

Market Outlook

Natural Bamboo Fiber is a cellulosic fiber which is soft, naturally breathable and moisture-wicking produced from the starchy pulp of bamboo plant. The bamboo fiber is widely used in bathroom textile, medical & hygienic clothing, bamboo clothing and home furnishings among others. They are as thin as hairs and have a smooth surface which comprises anti-fungal and antibacterial properties. The growing focus on environment-friendly textile production has led to a rise in demand for bamboo fiber amid growing concern about its production volume. Rising awareness among the population regarding environmental sustainability and conservation coupled with growing demand for natural fabrics is likely to propel the market demand over the forecast period. There has been a shift in consumer behavior, where consumers are more inclined toward quality over quantity has boosted the demand for green and sustainable products.

Rising use of advanced techniques such as enzyme technology, foam technology, and plasma technology for the production of eco-fibers are expected to create new opportunities for the market period. The global Bamboo Fibers market is valued at million US$ in 2018 is expected to reach million US$ by the end of 2025, growing at a CAGR of during 2019-2025 as the forecast period .

The globe such as North America, Europe, South America, the Middle East, and Africa and the Asia Pacific. Europe and North America regions are anticipated to show an upward growth in the years to come. While Bamboo Fibers Market in Asia Pacific regions is likely to show remarkable growth during the forecasted period. Cutting edge technology and innovations are the most important traits of the North America region and that's the reason most of the time the US dominates the global markets. Bamboo Fibers Market in South, America region is also expected to grow in near future.

The drivers which contribute to the growth are growing demand for Natural bamboo fiber and increasing investment in clothing and furnishing. Natural Bamboo fiber is thinner as compared to hair and has a round and smooth surface which makes it abrasion proof, anti-fungal, and antibacterial features create an upsurge in the demand for Bamboo Fiber. Restraints for the bamboo market are a high cost for processing and stringent regulation on the chemical processing of bamboo fiber.

China is the largest producer of bamboo fiber across the globe followed by India with a significant growth rate. In terms of volume, Asia Pacific is expected to dominate the global bamboo fiber market, owing to rising demand for furniture with the rapid growth of per capita income of the consumer in the region.
