Introduction

Magnesium Sulphate, also known as Epsom salt, is a chemical compound and sulphur. It has been used as a laxative. It is also used to boost plant growth. In modern times, however, it has found uses in other industrial applications such as flame retardants, explosives and fireworks (as an oxidizer).

➤ Visit this Page for More Information: Chemical Industry Projects

It's not something most people would think about on their own but there are great opportunities out there when you know where to look. One of those opportunities can be making money from selling magnesium sulphate for commercial use or personal use.

Uses

There are many uses for chemicals such as these, one of its most common uses is for food production purposes. When foods have been stored too long at high temperatures, they often tend to spoil quickly because they become moist with humidity. To prevent spoilage, a chemical like magnesium sulphate can be added to increase dryness and help inhibit any microbial growth.

This preserves food for several months longer than if it was not treated with an antiseptic solution. Magnesium sulphate is also commonly used by manufacturers who make cosmetic products so that they do not develop any unpleasant odors while they are sitting on store shelves waiting to be purchased by consumers.

Process

Magnesium sulphate is a chemical salt that is made from two soluble magnesium salts (magnesium hydroxide and sulphuric acid) mixed with water. The two magnesium salts are dissolved in separate tanks, both of which are then charged with distilled water, hence producing magnesium sulphate solution.

If needed, more concentrated mixtures can be produced. This process results in precipitation on cooling because of increase in temperature. Then filtered white crystalline substance called $MgSO_4 \cdot 7H_2O$ results.

➤ Related Feasibility Study Reports: Chemicals \(Organic, Inorganic, Industrial\) Projects

This precipitate has characteristic smell due to presence of Hydrogen Sulfide gas released during reaction of magnesium hydroxide with sulphuric acid and can be used as manure or applied directly on soil as fertiliser.
